

ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH PROJECT

DEFENDING PUBLIC HEALTH SINCE 2012

environmentalhealthproject.org

MEDIA ADVISORY

Contact: Scott Smith, ssmith@environmentalhealthproject.org, 412-600-0738

White Paper: EHP set to release “Pennsylvania’s Shale Gas Boom: What the Shapiro Administration Can Do to Better Protect Public Health”

The Environmental Health Project (EHP) will release its new white paper “Pennsylvania’s Shale Gas Boom: What the Shapiro Administration Can Do to Better Protect Public Health” during a virtual event on April 1 at noon. The paper examines the Shapiro Administration’s first two years in office and any progress it has made with respect to protecting residents’ health from shale gas industry pollution.

The release event will highlight perspectives from frontline residents and members of government before providing recommendations for steps the Shapiro administration can take to effectively champion Pennsylvanians’ health in the face of shale gas development. Speakers will include:

- Pennsylvania Rep. Arvind Venkat (PA District 30 and an emergency physician)
- Lois Bower-Bjornson (Southwestern Pennsylvania Field Organizer, Clean Air Council, and an impacted frontline resident)
- Alison L. Steele (Executive Director, Environmental Health Project)

Date & Time: Tuesday, April 1, Noon - 1 p.m.

Click to REGISTER NOW

We will provide an embargoed copy of the white paper prior to the launch event.

About the Environmental Health Project

The Environmental Health Project (EHP) is a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization that defends public health in the face of shale gas development. EHP provides frontline communities with timely monitoring, interpretation, and guidance while engaging diverse stakeholders: health professionals, researchers, community organizers, public servants, and others.

###